NEW FOREST FIRE FINDER

An instrument recently invented which is expected to reduce the danger from forest fires to a minimum has just been installed in the lookout towers in California forest. By peering through a small hole in an erect piece of steel the observer in the tower can see a fire within a radius of 50 miles. The center circumference of the apparatus is covered with a map which gives a clear outline of the country surrounding the lookout tower. Fires are sighted with exact accuracy so that firefighters may be dispatched to the spot at once.

GIGANTIC GERMAN FLOATING DOCK SURRENDERED

The huge German floating dock No. 23, delivered under the terms of the Peace Treaty, has just been completed and is berthed at Port Victoria, Sheerness, England. The total length exceeds 600 feet. Sixteen tugs were employed in bringing the immense structure from Wilhelmshaven, and some idea of its huge dimensions may be gathered from the fact that a German submarine dock was brought over inside the dock at the same time, the latter is shown in the center.

LAST OF 1812 NAVY BURNS AT PIER

Ravaged by flames, a blistered, blackened hulk, listing wearily over the lapping waters of the Hudson River, is all that remains today of one of the last of the giant warriors of the Golden Age of the American Navy, the training ship Granite State, dear to New York City as a last link with the sea-fighting of a hundred years ago. The Granite State is the third oldest vessel in the United States Navy still in existence. Her timbers were being hewn while the War of 1812 was still in progress. The name by which she was originally christened was Virginia. Later she was called the New Hampshire, and when the battleship New Hampshire was built she was named the Granite State. Since 1892 she has been used as a training ship.
